

Supporting students with Working Memory difficulties

Presented by Amanda Hicks

Learning and Literacy Specialist

Watch Online or On Demand

Tuesday 30th March 2021

10am - 12pm

Term 1
Online
Seminar

This seminar will provide teachers, parents and health professionals with the latest research on Working Memory Theory and its impact on learning for children with deficits in their working memory. The seminar will not only provide theory but specific intervention strategies that can be utilised upon seminar completion. The seminar will continue to examine the impact deficits in working memory have on learning and reading and provide intervention strategies for utilisation in both the mainstream and learning support environment. The seminar will assist teachers in understanding cognitive load theory and working memory and its relationship to material design, teacher delivery and classroom design.
