and Educational Psychologist

TUESDAY 25th, FEBRUARY
2025 | 7.30PM – 8.15PM | VIA ZOOM

When we think of today's younger generations, Gen Z or the newly coined Alphas, some may assume that the majority of these kids are confident, tech savvy, digital experts. However, when investigating the current trends and research, it is evident that children today are less optimistic, less happy, less satisfied with their lives and less resilient than previous generations.

Rates of self-harm have increased dramatically as well as other issues including body dysmorphic disorder, image-based sexual abuse, anxiety disorder, depressive disorders and eating disorders. There has also been a steep increase in developmental disorders such as Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, Oppositional Defiant Disorder, anxiety disorder and other disorders associated with mental health issues. Andrew will discuss these worrying trends and discuss what we can do to move forward to improve our children's lives.
